

ORGANIZATION for INTERNATIONAL COOPERATION

Breakthroughs in the Pursuit of Peace and Cooperation

Breakthrough: A sudden, dramatic, and important discovery or development; a significant and dramatic overcoming of a perceived obstacle, allowing the completion of a process, some previously unknown or unseen path, process, or technology that, when adopted, resolves the breakdown.

"The project makes sense. No one has ever done something like this before. I support the concept. Let's meet shortly to discuss it further,"

-Giandomenico Picco, Former UN Assistant-Secretary-General for Special Political Affairs and Special UN Envoy. (Negotiator: The release of the Beirut Hostages, the Soviet withdrawal from Afghanistan and the negotiations to end the Iran-Iraq War.)

"I encourage others to support the efforts of the Organization for International Cooperation."

Their innovative resources that will increase the effectiveness of governments are urgently needed."

-Ed Asner, Television and Film Actor, Former President, Screen Actors Guild and Activist

Background

OIC was established in July 1984 as a NJ based tax-exempt 501C3 non-profit and non-partisan organization by founding members Arnold Keiser, Leo Sprague, Francesca Milanato, Barbara Fate, Gene Rathbun and Carol Rathbun.

OIC was originally dedicated to promoting public understanding of the work of the United Nations, peace education, public responsibility for peace and the development of innovative international conflict and cooperation solutions.

OIC's involvement in the diplomatic community dates back to 1984 when we were founded. Political science and international affairs experts from academia are on our Advisory Board.

Ranking current and former high level diplomats also contribute important input into our body of knowledge. Additionally, OIC consults with experts in conflict resolution and prevention from numerous organizations when needed.

Who We Are Today.....

Since the mid 1990s OIC has focused primarily on foreign relations research and the advocacy of cutting-edge resources to support breakthroughs in foreign relations.

We are committed to supporting government and multilateral institution officials in producing unprecedented breakthrough results in their pursuit of peace and cooperation on all challenges.
