Dear Assistant Secretary Donfried,

Thank you for your very important service for our country. I would like to have the special honor of speaking with you about our extraordinary project.

Many people over the years have hoped that someday diplomacy could become so effective that armed conflict could become a thing of the past. Our OIC Foreign Relations Breakthrough Project is about the pursuit of that possibility.

The project involves advocating that foreign policymakers, negotiators, security strategists and others participate in short and powerful programs developed through ontology based research. Since the 1970s these extraordinary programs have had a consistent track record of unprecedented success where organizations around the world have been able to resolve current or longstanding serious issues.

The programs will make it possible for officials to produce unprecedented major breakthrough results in any serious security, humanitarian or environmental challenge. This is despite obstacles many believe are overwhelmingly difficult.

One of the most important aspects of the programs is that they dramatically expand the conscious awareness of participants. This is critically important because when highly skilled, educated and experienced officials are having great difficulty preventing or resolving conflict or other serious challenges, this reflects the fact that their level of conscious awareness is not at a sufficient level where they would easily have the ability to recognize what's missing.

I am attaching a document called Primary Programs that we wrote. It will explain the programs in more depth. Section 2 lists the type of results that are possible.

Important: Please do not delegate a third party or group to discuss this with me. Given the uncommon make-up of these resources simply reading about them or going through a delegated third party or group without my direct and immediate feedback will not work in this case. I am sending a document on delegating that explains the necessity of a direct discussion related specifically to this resource.

One of my motivations for working 24/7 on this project is that these programs can make it possible for diplomacy to become many times more effective. Thus conflict prevention and resolution can become so effective that our young people will not be dying in foreign conflicts. My son was a US Marine NCO.

With admiration and profound respect, I remain,

Sincerely yours,

AKeiser
